Introduction

Welcome to the Corcoran Report, our comprehensive quarterly examination of the residential real estate market in Brooklyn. The report examines closed transactions during Fourth Quarter of 2014 (October 1 through December 31) and compares them to Fourth Quarter 2013 and Third Quarter 2014. Statistics in this report trail actual market conditions by approximately eight to twelve weeks due to the typical lag time between a contract signing and its closing.

Brooklyn's popularity as a worldwide brand and a local housing destination is undeniable. In nearly every submarket in the borough, 2014 brought higher prices as demand out-stripped supply. Market-wide average price per square foot rose $15 \%$ year-over-year, more than double the percentage change experienced across the East River in Manhattan. Sales activity overall fell $4 \%$ from a year ago, a persistent trend attributable to a dearth of new development coming to market. Those few new developments that have launched have generally been met with strong sales, pushing the boundaries of price, however most have yet to close and are not reflected in Fourth Quarter figures.

This quarter saw the largest annual gain in average price and median price since the Brooklyn market began its postrecession rebound in Second Quarter 2011. Relative to Fourth Quarter 2013, median price escalated to $579,000, an increase of $31 \%$ and the highest figure since Third Quarter 2008. Average price grew $23 \%$ year-over-year to $$ 708,000$. Fourth Quarter 2013 had an influx of homes sold under $$ 500,000$, driving down price metrics that quarter; percentage changes are actually less versus two years ago, with median price up $16 \%$ and average price up $15 \%$ versus Fourth Quarter 2012. In contrast, Fourth Quarter 2014 had an influx of sales over $$ 1,000,000$, as the high-end of the market claimed $21 \%$ market share, up from $16 \%$ just a quarter prior.

Notably, the current price gains occurred despite a limited amount of new development closings. New development comprised only $10 \%$ of all sales during Fourth Quarter. This is driving large price increase in the resale condo market, particularly in recently constructed buildings in Dumbo, Downtown Brooklyn and Williamsburg (Average condo price per square foot is up $23 \%$ in Brooklyn Heights/Cobble Hill/Dumbo/Downtown and up $15 \%$ in Williamsburg/ Greenpoint). But the largest increases are occurring further afield as lack of supply has buyers expanding their searches. The neighborhoods just south of Prospect Park had a $36 \%$ increase in average condo price per square foot, while Bed-Stuy/Crown Heights rose 64\%.

Brooklyn Market-Wide

Market-wide average price per square foot of $$ 789$ reached a six-year high this quarter, up $15 \%$ from a year ago and $7 \%$ from Third Quarter 2014. Average price rose $23 \%$ versus Fourth Quarter 2013, bolstered by a large number of sales over $$ 1,000,000$. The average price was $$ 708,000$, the second highest since Third Quarter 2008. Brooklyn median price of $$ 579,000$ was $31 \%$ higher than this time last year.

Resale Market-Wide

Resale condo and coop prices showed impressive double-digit annual gains, fueled by both strong demand and still-low supply. The average resale condo price reached $$ 866,000,19 \%$ higher than this time last year. Average condo price per square foot of $$ 839$ was a six-year high figure. Versus Third Quarter 2014, resale condo price metrics were also higher, but average and median coop price both displayed $5 \%$ declines.

New Developments

New development average and median price annual gains were $18 \%$ and $27 \%$, respectively. Price per square foot was $9 \%$ higher than Fourth Quarter 2013, but was $15 \%$ below Third Quarter 2014. Only small new development properties that lack amenities and other premium qualities had closings this quarter, contributing to the lower price per foot figure.

Townhouses

Townhouse averages can be skewed each quarter due to the limited number of sales. The average price of a single-family townhouse increased from both last quarter and last year. This is mainly due to sales at high prices in prime neighborhoods. Fourth Quarter 2014 had the second highest single-family townhouse sale in Brooklyn in ten years. The single-family median sale price of $$ 2,000,000$ was $13 \%$ gain from a year ago and a $29 \%$ rise from Third Quarter. Median price of two-to-four family townhomes was $3 \%$ lower than a year ago, due to an increase in sales in neighborhoods south of Prospect Park.

Brooklyn Market-Wide

The number of transactions was lower than both last quarter and last year due to persistently low inventory. This is the fifth consecutive quarter of year-over-year sales decline. A 4\% year-over-year decline in sales was predominately driven by the severe lack of new development closings, which comprised just $10 \%$ of the market this quarter. Sales were $9 \%$ lower than the average number of sales per quarter since Third Quarter 2008.

Sales by Price Category

Market share of sales over $$ 1,000,000$ comprised $21 \%$ of sales. Simultaneously, market share of sales under $500,000 continued to shrink and remained under 50\% market share for three consecutive quarters. Sales between $500,000 and $750,000 shrank to 15\% from 19\% a year ago. Sales between $750,000 and $1,000,000 grew to 21\% from 13\% in Fourth Quarter 2013.

Neighborhood Sales Comparison

Fort Greene, Clinton Hill and Prospect Heights displayed the biggest gain in market share from a year ago. Growing to 17\% of the market, this submarket had the most sales outside of South Brooklyn. Market share in Dumbo, Brooklyn Heights and Cobble Hill shrank to 14\% of sales during Fourth Quarter from 18\% a year ago.

Property Type Sales Comparison

New developments represented just 10\% of total sales this quarter, a decline in market share from 12\% a year ago. This is the second lowest market share for new developments since we have been tracking this metric. Condo sales in the resale market made up nearly half the sales in Brooklyn this quarter, growing from one-third of sales during Fourth Quarter 2013. As a result, market share of resale coops decreased.

Williamsburg - Greenpoint

Average condo price per square foot saw double-digit annual gains for the eighth consecutive quarter. Average sale price of $$ 1,033,000$ grew by 5\% from Fourth Quarter 2013. This increase marked the 15th consecutive quarter of an annual price gain. At $$ 937,000$, median price increased $10 \%$ from last year and $13 \%$ from last quarter. Note that there are a statistically insignificant number of coop sales in the submarket.

Median coop price increased $20 \%$ from a year ago to $$ 570,000$. This increase was the largest annual growth in coop median sale price seen in the Borough this quarter. Condo average sale price per square foot exceeded $$ 1,000$ for the third consecutive quarter, growing $23 \%$ from a year ago and $5 \%$ from Third Quarter 2014. The average condo sale price was $37 \%$ more than the figure from a year ago and slightly higher than last quarter.

Park Slope - Gowanus

Coop average and median sale price in Park Slope - Gowanus declined year-over-year and was also below Third Quarter 2014. The lower figures can be justified by fewer sales of residences located on Prospect Park West. The median price gains in the condo market was minimal versus a year ago and all condo price metrics were lower than last quarter due to a decline in the number of sales over $1,000,000.

Fort Greene - Clinton Hill - Prospect Heights

The average condo sale price jumped $15 \%$ from Fourth Quarter 2013 to $$ 875,000$, fueled by an increase in sales of larger residences. For the first time post-recession, average condo sale price in Fort Greene - Clinton Hill - Prospect Heights was equal to Park Slope - Gowanus. The median condo sale price reached a six-year record high figure for the submarket. Strong demand for housing in the neighborhood also drove the 17\% average price gain in the coop market relative to Fourth Quarter 2013.

South Brooklyn

East Flatbush Marine Park Mill Basin Bergen Beach Gerritsen Beach Greenwood Sunset Park Borough Park Mapleton Midwood Bay Ridge Dyker Heights Bensonhurst Bath Beach Gravesend Sheepshead Bay Sea Gate Coney Island Brighton Beach Manhattan Beach

Average and median condo sale price in southern Brooklyn experienced solid year-over-year gains during Fourth Quarter 2014. The figures were lower than last quarter due to an increase in market share of smaller residences. Average condo price per square foot was $$ 437$, a $12 \%$ annual increase. Coop median and average price also increased slightly from last year, but by less than 5\%.
